OUR dads are our heroes. He’s spent so many years (or is still yet to) enduring tugs of war, playing taxi service and generously providing a bank on tap, so surely he deserves a treat once a year

With Father’s Day on Sunday, now’s the chance to thank him.

Fact. Dads instinctively can’t ask for directions, it’s just part of their fatherly make up.

They’re likely to be just as taxing when you’re hinting for gift ideas for this momentous occasion. It’s a given that they’ll react surprised with enthusiasm when receiving a gift you have identified as something they really need rather than something they actually want.

However, there’s no need to be stuck for ideas and lets be honest, time is ticking so before you make a beeline for the last minute cliches, look no further than the high street.

With the region peppered with charming gifts, you’ll feel instantly spoilt for choice.

Thumbs up to our local towns of Kent and Sussex, which are lined with trendy boutiques and department stores filled with a plethora of treats for the most important man in your life.

“Always try your best” is a frequent expression echoed from toddler through to adulthood, so help him find his inner superhero and pay some paternal homage to show your dad, grandfather or even father-to-be how much he’s loved and raise a smile on his face.

Whether he’s a golfer, foodie, reader or techie, chances are you’re looking for a bit of help and if your Papa is one in a million, you may feel like raising the ante.

Whether you want to splash out or send a token gift, indulge him with love and heaps of style with these handpicked, well deserved treats.

Style is the secret ingredient to any well thought-out gift, so to guarantee you remain the apple of his eye, choose something with a little panache.

Surely there’s only a certain amount of socks and chocs he can continue to cope with?
