

2022 Interior Summer Trends

Olivia Crosher, Interior Designer, Naturewall, shares her top five predicted trends for the summer of 2022.

Self-Spaces

'Self-care has become a big focus, and as such so have spaces dedicated to mindful moments. Whether it's turning the spare room into a hobby area or a cosy corner that imitates a spa-like experience, the celebration of wellbeing has never been more popular. This new revolution makes use of all those little nooks, bathrooms, and previously hidden gems the home has to offer.'

Accent Academia

'The combination of maximalism and culture has brought a romanticised trend of English eccentricity. Influenced by deep nature and dark wood furniture with intricate details and carvings.'

Gorgeous Greens

‘From olive to sage, eucalyptus to mint, green is a harmonious colour that is continually trending and evolving. Green colour palettes are now a firm styling anchor to many interior schemes. Whether it’s through wall paint or layering with linens and throws, there is a consistent demand for this organic and extremely versatile colour’

Tropical Trends

‘Connect a space to nature by maximising light, plants and nature-inspired colours and materials. Inviting calming energy and bringing the outdoors in evokes a feeling of tranquillity. Biophilic design has taken over the interiors scene over the last few months’
