London (4 September 2025) The October issue of National Geographic Traveller (UK) sets out in search of Brazil's most mesmerising sights and sounds, inviting readers to roam vast wetlands, lose themselves in spectacular carnivals and explore jungles stalked by black jaguars.

While the UK moves into autumn, Brazil is stepping into spring — and into the spotlight. Increased flight capacity, improvements in infrastructure and new tourism projects are opening the country up to a new generation of travellers — many of them keen to venture into the nation's lesser-known corners. This latest issue steps beyond the velvet sands of Copacabana Beach to uncover experiences that tap into Brazil's wilder side, from kayaking trips through flooded Amazonian forests to capoeira masterclasses in Salvador. Experience it all in the October issue of National Geographic Traveller (UK), available on newsstands now.
